DR. JACQUELINE ALDER, HEAD, FRESHWATER AND MARINE ECOSYSTEMS BRANCH, DIVISION OF ENVIRONMENTAL POLICY IMPLEMENTATION, UNEP

Jackie Alder is the Coordinator of the Marine and Coastal Ecosystem Branch at UNEP. She has been with UNEP for just over one year, and her role is to develop and strengthen UNEPs Marine and Coastal Program.

Before joining UNEP, Jackie was a Marine and Fisheries Policy Analyst and Researcher at the Fisheries Centre at the University of British Columbia in Vancouver, Canada (2001-2008) and Edith Cowan University in Perth, Australia (1995-2001).

She has published numerous articles in a range of peer-reviewed journals, books and co-authored the popular book Coastal Planning and Management. She has worked extensively on coral reef island communities and marine-protected area management and has keen appreciation of the impacts of climate change on oceans and coast, as well as what the future holds for marine and coastal communities.

Jackie is a dual citizen of Australia and Canada. She obtained a B.Sc. (Hons) in Canada and a PhD. (Marine-Protected Area Management) in Australia.

THE BALTIC SEA: ECOSYSTEM AND PROSPERITY

PROFESSOR ERIK BONSDORFF, ÅBO AKADEMI UNIVERSITY

Erik Bonsdorff is professor of marine biology at the department of biosciences, Åbo Akademi University. He has been active within Baltic Sea marine research since the late 1970s, and published over 100 international papers within marine biology and ecology in relation to the environmental conditions of the sea.

His main fields of interest include long-term and large-scale changes of the ecosystem (climate change, eutrophication, hypoxia etc) as well as aspects of structural and functional marine biodiversity and food web ecology of coastal waters. He has also worked in multidisciplinary projects linking aspects of ecology and governance of the sea.

Erik Bonsdorff has served on numerous national and international expert advisory panels within marine environmental ecology as well as academic evaluation boards.

BO GUSTAFSSON, DIRECTOR, BNI SWEDEN

Bo Gustafsson is Director in BNI Sweden, Marine models, Baltic Sea Centre, Stockholm University.

He holds a PhD in physical oceanography, but specialize more and more in the interaction between physical and biogeochemical processes on large scales. The main focus is development and implementation of marine models in the Nest system.

Bo is Director of the Baltic Nest Institute Sweden and is also responsible for the cooperation with HELCOM.

MARIANNE KETTUNEN, SENIOR POLICY ANALYST, IEEP

Marianne Kettunen is a Senior Policy Analyst at the Institute for European Environmental Policy (IEEP). She has ten years of expertise in issues related to the EU and international biodiversity policy with special focus on assessing the socio-economic importance of biodiversity and ecosystem services and supporting the integration of these aspects into policies and decision-making processes. She has also in-depth expertise in exploring opportunities for financing biodiversity conservation, including identifying innovative sources for funding.

Marianne has been an integral part of the Economics of Ecosystems and Biodiversity -initiative (TEEB), first coordinating the assessment of socio- economic benefits of protected areas to international and national policy-makers (2008-2010) and then leading a scoping assessment on the value of nature in the Nordic Countries (TEEB Nordic). She is currently supporting the work of two individual ecosystem service assessments, namely in Finland and for the Arctic region.

Furthermore, Marianne has a long track record in outreach, policy influence and capacity building on the value of nature, ecosystem services and Green Economy. She is also the lead editor and key author of a practical guidance book on the socio-economic value of protected areas, including marine protected areas, published in 2013 (Taylor&Francis/EarthScan). She has an MSc in biodiversity research and environmental science from the University of Turku, Finland.
